Executive Summary

TRC was contracted by SunEast Flat Creek Solar LLC (Applicant) to perform grassland breeding bird surveys for the proposed SunEast Flat Creek Solar project (Project), an approximately 300-megawatt (MW) photovoltaic (PV) solar energy generating facility located in the Towns of Root and Canajoharie, Montgomery County, New York (Figure 1). The Project Area is 2,743 acres; however, the entirety of land within the Project Area is not anticipated to be necessary for siting Project components.

The surveys were performed in compliance with the New York State Department of Environmental Conservation (NYSDEC) Survey Protocol for State-listed Breeding Grassland Bird Species (2021; Protocol) in order to determine the presence and Project Area use by state-listed threatened (ST), endangered (SE), or special concern (SC) grassland bird species during the breeding season, defined within the Protocol as May 15 through July 20. Due to the amount of northern harrier (Circus hudsonius; ST) activity observed during winter raptor surveys, the Applicant implemented an early start to the survey effort ahead of the above-mentioned season. Surveys were performed from May 3, 2022, through July 15, 2022 (survey period). This effort supports the development of an application to the Office of Renewable Energy Siting (ORES) under Section 94-c of the New York Executive Law.

Point count surveys were conducted at 62 survey locations (points) within the Project Area. The number of points fluctuated during the survey period due to changes in land access and habitat shifts due to agricultural production. Ten rounds (visits) of point count surveys were conducted over the course of the survey period, with each location visited between one and ten times, resulting in a total of 527 point count surveys.

A total of 1,176 bird observations of 35 species and [REDACTED] were recorded within the Project Area during the regular point count surveys. An additional 64 species were recorded incidentally to regular surveys throughout the survey period. Bobolink (Dolichonyx oryzivorus) was the most frequently observed species (116 individuals), comprising 20.4% of all birds observed. Thereafter, the most frequently observed species were American pipit (Anthus rubescens) (90 individuals), savannah sparrow (Passerulus sandwichensis) (81 individuals), red-winged blackbird (Agelaius phoeniceus) (72 individuals), and song sparrow (Melospiza melodia) (35 individuals). These five most frequently observed species comprised 69.4% of all individuals observed during regular surveys.

The grassland bird community observed in the Project Area is primarily composed of species widely distributed in and typical of New York State. Observed species are representative of those expected where suitable grassland habitat is present. The number of observations fluctuated throughout the survey period with the highest recorded on May 5, 2022 (n=112) and the lowest on June 24, 2022 (n=1).

Pre-Application consultation received from the ORES on June 8, 2022, indicated known occupied habitat for [REDACTED], overlapping the Project Area, as well as occupied habitat for [REDACTED]

(ST) within 5 miles of the Project Area. [REDACTED]

1.0 Introduction

1.1 Project Description

TRC was contracted by SunEast Flat Creek Solar LLC (Applicant), a subsidiary of SunEast Development, LLC, (SunEast), to perform grassland breeding bird surveys for the proposed SunEast Flat Creek Solar Project (Project), an approximately 300-megawatt (MW) photovoltaic (PV) solar energy generating facility located in the Towns of Root and Canajoharie, Montgomery County, New York (Figure 1). The Project Area is 2,743 acres; however, the entirety of land within the Project Area is not anticipated to be necessary for siting Project components.

1.2 Background Information

Multiple locations within the Project Area contain potentially suitable habitat for state-listed threatened (ST), endangered (SE), or special concern (SC) grassland breeding bird species known to occur in New York State, including [REDACTED]

[REDACTED]

[REDACTED] Pre-Application consultation received from the Office of Renewable Energy Siting (ORES) on June 8, 2022, indicated [REDACTED]

[REDACTED]

Potential habitat for grassland breeding birds is located throughout the Project Area and consists of successional old fields and agricultural areas.

2.0 Methods

2.1 Survey Protocol

Due to the amount of [REDACTED] activity observed during winter raptor surveys, the Applicant implemented an early start to the survey effort ahead of the recommended survey period outlined in the New York State Department of Environmental Conservation (NYSDEC) Survey Protocol for State-listed Breeding Grassland Bird Species (2021; Protocol), which recommends breeding bird surveys be performed from May 15 through July 20. The Protocol requires a total of eight approximately weekly visits during the survey period, with two visits conducted in May, four visits in June, and two visits in July. Per the Protocol and recommendations received from ORES on April 29, 2022, an additional two visits were conducted during the first two weeks of May, moving the start date ahead to May 3, 2022, for a total of 10 visits. Surveys were conducted approximately weekly at each point throughout the survey period.

Surveys began one-half hour before sunrise, when feasible, and ended no later than 10:30 a.m. The order in which points were surveyed was rotated each visit, such that stations were surveyed during different time periods over the course of the survey. When mowing or other forms of habitat management occurred, this was noted on the data sheets and is reported in the results section (Section 3.0) of this report. For the safety of the surveyors, surveys were not conducted in pasture being actively grazed by cattle or other livestock. Point counts began following a 2-minute acclimation period, with the observer waiting in silence after arriving at the point to allow birds to acclimate from any disturbance. Counts were conducted for five minutes at each point, during which all birds identified by sight or sound were recorded.

Meandering surveys were conducted while walking between points during each visit to record species incidentally observed outside of the point-count survey boundaries while still within grassland habitat on the Project Area.

2.1.1 Weather Observations

Weather conditions were noted at the beginning of each survey and when conditions changed significantly during the survey. Parameters recorded include:

- wind speed (Beaufort scale) and direction,
- temperature (Fahrenheit),
- relative humidity (percent),
- barometric pressure (inHg),
- cloud cover (percent),
- visibility (miles, and
- precipitation (inch).

Surveys were not conducted in adverse weather conditions (e.g., heavy rain).

2.2 Survey Point Selection

Survey locations were selected as outlined in the SunEast Flat Creek Breeding Bird Survey Study Plan, submitted to ORES and NYSDEC on April 15, 2022. Initial site selection was based on the Protocol and was revised, as applicable, following input from ORES and NYSDEC on April 29, 2022. Based on the Protocol, suitable grassland sites are areas larger than 12 acres that are dominated by grasses and/or forbs. Multiple grassland patches may exist in any given area separated by obstructions (e.g., forests, hedgerows, large roads, and developed areas).

Habitat conditions were determined through a combination of information gathered during previous site visits and the United States Department of Agriculture's (USDA) 2021 Cropland Data Layer (CDL). The USDA CDL was used to assess areas in which previous site reconnaissance was not performed. During Visit 1, surveyors visited each point and determined the actual land cover (i.e., grassland versus row crop). Any points which were determined to be a row crop (plowed/tilled) were removed from the survey effort.

Points were non-randomly placed within habitat patches which met the requirements established in the Protocol. Points were placed to maximize the number of points per field while maintaining a 100 meter (m) minimum distance from obstructions, and a 250m distance between points. In some instances, the 100m distance from obstructions was not adhered to due to field shape. GIS shapefiles showing the Project Area boundary, survey locations, row crop delineations, and the locations of listed species observations are included as Attachment C, a digital file accompaniment.

Based on the review of the USDA CDL and previous site reconnaissance, 75 points were initially selected. Following changes in land use (e.g., conversion to row crop), 12 points were eliminated over the course of the survey period. An additional 13 points could not be accessed for survey based on nascency of landowner contracts. Where habitat conditions changed during the survey period or differed from the USDA CDL and previous site visits, photographs were taken to document on-site conditions, and are included as Attachment B, a digital file accompaniment.

2.3 Data Collection

Detailed observation data was collected during each survey. All data was entered into the cloud-based data management program Fulcrum© using a smart phone or tablet. Survey data forms are included as Attachment A, a digital file accompaniment.

At each point, the following site- and survey-specific information was recorded:

- date,
- observer name(s),
- Project name,
- point number,
- start and end time of observation period,
- visit number, and
- weather information.

During the 5-minute point count, the following data were recorded:

- species identification,
- number of individuals per species,
- sex (if known),
- mode of detection (auditory, visual, both),
- distance from observer (m),
- behavior (singing male, territorial display, etc.), and
- “highest” behavior code for each species based on breeding bird atlas definitions.

Probable breeding behavior includes:

- Singing males present or breeding calls heard,

- an observed pair,
- territorial displays (i.e., males chasing other males),
- courtship displays,
- visiting a nest site,
- building a nest (i.e., carrying nesting material),

Confirmed breeding behavior includes:

- Distraction display,
- used nest found,
- recently fledged young,
- adult carrying a fecal sac,
- adult carrying food,
- nest with eggs, and
- nest with young.

Field biologists also recorded any species heard or seen during the surveys that were greater than 100 m from the point, as well as flyover species, or species detected outside of grassland habitat. Species detected outside of the scheduled survey time, during meander surveys, or otherwise, were recorded as incidental observations.

The following site description and vegetation measurements were recorded at each survey location at the conclusion of each point count:

- habitat type (hay, pasture, etc.),
- distance (m) from a trail or road during Visit 1,
- distance (m) from hedgerow or wood line during Visit 1,
- vegetation measurements (cm) within 25 m of the survey point:
- percent cover of each vegetation type (grass, forb, etc.),
- dominant grass and forb species,
- percent bare ground,
- average vegetation height (cm),
- litter depth (cm),
- nearest shrub above vegetation height (m) during Visit 1,
- vegetation density (sparse, moderate, or dense),
- presence and extent of invasive species, if any, and
- recent management practices.

Average height and density of vegetation were visually estimated by the surveying biologist(s).

2.5 Field Quality Assurance and Quality Control

Digital data sheets were reviewed for completeness and accuracy prior to leaving the survey site. Any discrepancies noted were resolved at that time. All data records were synced to an electronic database where they received additional quality reviews throughout the survey period.

3.0 Results

3.1 Survey Effort

A total of 56 points were initially identified based upon review of aerial imagery, the USDA CDL, and input received from landowners. An additional 19 points (points 17, 28, 56-70, 74, 75) were added following feedback received from ORES and NYSDEC on April 29, 2022, for a total of 75 points. Thirteen points (39-43, 49, 50, 62-67) could not be accessed for survey based on nascency of landowner contracts. Points were summarily eliminated from the survey as they were converted to active agricultural production (i.e., row crop). Surveys were conducted at each of the points until visually confirmed to no longer meet the criteria for grassland habitat established in the Protocol (i.e., evidence of plowing). Points 3, 5, 8-10, 13, 16, 45, 46, 51, 55, and 73 were removed over the course of the survey period following agricultural conversion. Throughout the survey period, a total of 527 point-count surveys were completed within grassland habitat. Table 1 provides an overview of the points included in the survey effort.

3.2 Weather

Table 2 provides weather data for each survey conducted during the survey period. No surveys were conducted during adverse weather conditions (e.g., heavy rain). There were no weather patterns observed which may have created variation in observations throughout the survey period. No disturbance events that would have significantly impacted observer ability to detect birds were recorded.

3.3 Vegetation

Many points contained multiple habitat types within the 100-meter point count radius or were characterized as multiple types due to changes in management throughout the survey period. Fifty points were located in hay, 46 in mixed grass, eight in old field, 15 in row crop, four in pasture, and seven in a wet meadow. Vegetative and cover conditions were documented for all points and are reported in Table 3. Additionally, photographic documentation of areas confirmed to be row crop is provided as Attachment B.

Average vegetation height was notably taller at Points 15, 35-37 and 44 than at other points throughout the survey period. Additionally, Points 4, 14, 31-33, and 38 exhibited a higher overall percent forb cover than other points surveyed, though grass was dominant at most of the points surveyed. Woody cover was minimal or nonexistent at most points, however, certain points dominated by old field habitat, such as Points 35-38, contained some woody cover in the form of successional shrubs. Litter depth was negligible throughout, as grassland habitat throughout the Project Area consisted almost entirely of agricultural hay fields undergoing regular mowing and hay harvesting. However, certain points, such as Points 4 and 35-38 which were dominated by old field habitat, had elevated litter depth during the first few visits of the season, as a result of old, dead vegetation and debris retained from the previous year.

Dominant grass species included orchardgrass (Dactylis spp.), tall fescue (Festuca arundinacea), Kentucky bluegrass (Poa pratensis), reed canary grass (Phalaris arundinacea), and timothy grass (Phleum pratense).

Dominant forbs included dandelion (Taraxacum spp.), common bedstraw (Galium aparine), alfalfa (Medicago sativa), goldenrod (Solidago spp.), milkweed (Asclepias spp.), and clover (Trifolium spp.).

One invasive species, reed canary grass, was reported during vegetation surveys within the Project Area. This species was observed at 53 of 62 survey locations.

3.4 Avian Use

Over the entire survey period, surveyors recorded a total of 6,163 bird observations during regular surveys and incidentally to surveys. These observations represented 99 distinct species and [REDACTED] (Tables 4 - 5). Of the species observed, 64 species (4,987 observations) were observed only incidentally to surveys and are described in Section 3.6.

A total of 1,175 observations of 35 species were recorded during regular surveys. Observations of 568 individual birds observed within grassland habitat in the Project Area during point count surveys (Table 4). The species observed most often during point count surveys was the bobolink (Dolichonyx oryzivorus) (116 individuals), comprising 20.4% of all individual birds observed. Bobolink were observed at 44 of 62 points.

Following bobolink, the next most frequently observed species were American pipit (Anthus rubescens) (90 individuals observed at one point, 15.8% of individuals), savannah sparrow (Passerculus sandwichensis) (81 individuals observed at 47 points, 14.3% of individuals), red-winged blackbird (Agelaius phoeniceus) (72 individuals observed at 57 points, 12.7% of individuals), and song sparrow (Melospiza melodia) (35 individuals observed at 60 points, 6.2% of individuals). The American pipit observation could be considered an outlier, as the high number of observations is driven by a single observation on May 5, 2022, of a flock of 90 individuals observed at Point 16. This species is not known to breed in New York State; therefore, this observation was likely of a migrating flock moving through and not representative of a species breeding within the Project Area.

The remaining 94 bird species observed had 31 or fewer individuals observed, averaging 1.8 individuals per species, and collectively accounted for 30.6% of all individuals observed. Additional information on individuals observed, as well as behaviors documented and abundance by species, can be found in Table 4.

Temporal Use

Bird observations peaked during the beginning of the survey period with the highest number of observations (n=112) recorded during Visit 1 on May 5, 2022; however, the number of observations fluctuated throughout, with the second highest recorded number of observations occurring during Visit 5 on June 6, 2022 (Figure 3). The lowest number of observations (n=1) occurred on June 24, 2022.

Species richness remained relatively constant throughout the survey period, with the highest number of species recorded on June 21, 2022 (n=13), and the lowest number of species recorded on June 6, 24, and 29, 2022 (n=1; Figure 3).

Spatial Use

Species richness varied across survey points, with an average of 4.2 species observed per point. Points with higher number of species were located within [REDACTED]. Species richness ranged from 1 to 13 species and was greatest at [REDACTED] (Figure 4). Number of individuals ranged from 1 to 90, averaging 9.6 individuals per point (Figure 5). The highest number of individuals was documented at Point [REDACTED], with 90 individuals across one species (influenced by a large flock of American pipit).

3.5 Listed Species

[REDACTED] (Tables 4 - 5). [REDACTED] were documented during the survey, including [REDACTED] incidental sightings. Individuals were observed on May 3, 5, 17, 23, and 24, June 1, 7, 14, and 21, July 8 and 15, 2022. [REDACTED]

[REDACTED]. This included the [REDACTED] that occurred during regular surveys. All remaining [REDACTED] sightings occurred incidentally to surveys. [REDACTED] including a [REDACTED] [REDACTED] were observed in suitable habitat, [REDACTED] territorial displays, and agitated behavior throughout the survey period on May 3 and 23, June 7, July 8 and 15, 2022. An additional [REDACTED] observations from nearby Points [REDACTED] also involved territorial displays, foraging, and flying through in suitable habitat on May 3, May 17, June 1, June 21, July 8, and July 15. [REDACTED] was observed flying through to the northeast of [REDACTED] on May 17, 2022, located [REDACTED]. [REDACTED] were observed foraging and flying through in suitable habitat at [REDACTED] in the [REDACTED] of the Project Area. Lastly, [REDACTED] was observed at [REDACTED] and one at [REDACTED] on May 10 and May 24, respectively. Both individuals were observed foraging in suitable habitat.

Nearly all [REDACTED] observations occurred within or immediately adjacent to suitable habitat such as [REDACTED]. Behaviors observed were consistent with breeding activity and essential behaviors (foraging, roosting). The exact locations of all observations are provided on Figure 6.

[REDACTED] These were collectively observed on [REDACTED] occasions. The [REDACTED] on May 9, 2022. [REDACTED] were observed incidentally to regular surveys on May 9 and June 15, 2022. The first observation occurred northeast of [REDACTED] vocalizing from a nearby hedgerow. The second observation was of an [REDACTED] (based on size) flying to the west of [REDACTED] carrying prey, which can be attributed to a courtship display or to chick provisioning. In this case, due to uncertainty, the observation was reported as [REDACTED]. Finally, [REDACTED] were observed during regular surveys at [REDACTED] on May 25, June 14, June 21, and July 11, 2022. An additional [REDACTED] observations were recorded incidentally to regular surveys on July 6 and 11, 2022, at [REDACTED]. All [REDACTED] observations were of singing males in nesting habitat.

3.6 Incidental Observations

Among the 99 species identified, 4,987 of 6,162 (80.9%) observations were incidental, due to detection outside of the 100m effective survey radius, in non-grassland habitat, as fly-overs (Table 4). [REDACTED] state-listed species was observed incidentally to surveys, American bittern (n=1, SC), [REDACTED] (Section 3.5). Out of all incidental observations, 88 of 98 species were detected during meander surveys conducted throughout the Project Area during transit between survey points (Table 5).

4.0 Discussion

Over the course of the survey period, 527 surveys were conducted. A total of 6,162 observations of 99 species and one unidentified flycatcher (Empidonax spp.). During regular surveys, 1,176 observations from 35 species were documented. The bird community observed within the Project is composed primarily of species widely distributed and typical across New York State. The most frequently observed species were bobolink, American pipit, savannah sparrow, red-winged blackbird, and song sparrow, collectively representing 69.4% of all individuals recorded. Observed species are representative of those expected where [REDACTED] is present.

Observations were distributed throughout the Project Area, with the highest number of individuals documented within [REDACTED]. Temporal use was relatively consistent throughout the survey period, with a notable peak on May 5, 2022, which was driven primarily by a single observation of a large flock of American pipits recorded on that date. Species richness remained relatively consistent throughout.

Probable breeding behavior was observed for most species recorded determined predominantly by the presence of singing males. Probable breeding activity of [REDACTED] was observed at [REDACTED]. On [REDACTED] occasions spanning the entire survey period, individuals were observed in suitable nesting habitat exhibiting territorial or agitated behaviors, including repeatedly dive-bombing the observer. On June 7, 2022, [REDACTED] was observed performing a prey transfer in mid-air. [REDACTED]. Possible indicators of breeding activity, including adults in suitable nesting habitat, and essential behaviors such as foraging, were observed for [REDACTED] on multiple occasions throughout the survey period. In addition to [REDACTED] was observed incidentally to regular surveys within the Project Area, however this individual was flying through and did not exhibit any breeding or essential behavior. No SE species were recorded during the survey period.

Probable breeding behavior was recorded for [REDACTED]. Nests were observed for two species (savannah sparrow and red-winged blackbird) within the Project Area. [REDACTED]

In addition to species detected during regular surveys, 64 species were observed only incidentally to surveys. Many of these observations were of individuals singing from adjacent wooded areas bordering grassland patches. Species observed incidentally are more representative of the broader New York State breeding bird community and primarily include forest-associated species such as the black-capped chickadee (Poecille atricapillus), eastern wood-pewee (Contopus virens), and red-eyed vireo (Vireo olivaceus), or shrubland-associated species such as field sparrow (Spizzella pusilla), indigo bunting (Passerina cyanea), and common yellowthroat (Geothlypis trichas).

5.0 Recommendations

The results of this survey indicate that grassland habitat within the Project Area supports avian communities common throughout New York State. [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] Based on these findings, no additional studies are recommended to assess potential impacts of the SunEast Flat Creek Solar Project on grassland breeding birds.
